Body hair removal is a necessary evil. Whether it's before a holiday or that time of year when you finally shed your jeans, if you live in dread of ingrown hairs or waxing appointments, then you should bite the bullet and go for laser hair removal - a treatment which means you won't have to do any of that for several years. Bliss.

In-the-know clients flock to Bodyvie in Richmond, a clean, quiet and highly professional clinic with secret weapon, Dr Weber, at the helm. With over 30 years of medical experience and a client list that includes beauty editors, actors and TV presenters, he has a wealth of knowledge in skincare. Weber has always had an eye on the pulse of what's next in the world of aesthetics, so it's no surprise that Bodyvie is the first UK clinic to offer the Bios Square Epil Laser.

This special laser treats every skin phototype at any time of year, offers high comfort during treatment sessions and has minimised downtime with safe and long-lasting results. Best of all, it can treat all skin types at speeds that are three times faster than its rivals. It hurts a little - but no way near as much as a wax and I can see results two weeks after the first session. I cannot believe I haven't done this sooner. How many treatments you'll need depends on your skin and hair, but the team will prescribe the right course and a hair-free future can be yours. ♦
